For nearly 2 decades, hair and makeup artist Stacy Gray has been summoned by an impressive mix of film, TV and music industry clientele such as: Beyonce, Alicia Keys, Lebron James, Cardi B, Sting, Sean "Diddy" Combs, Nas, Jill Scott, Lady Gaga, Angela Davis, Jay Z, Taraji P. Henson, Rick Ross and Kanye West and so many more.

She's worked on countless commercials, television shows and Film such as Mercedes Benz, Oral B, Major League Baseball, NBA, Empire and Saturday Night Live (SNL). Ms. Gray has worked with top photographers and publications such as Instyle, Vogue, Interview Magazine, Rolling Stone and Essence and she is now being called upon to work on feature films.

20 years ago, Gray's natural gift to make people feel good along with her passion to help others, lead her to pursue a degree in Nursing. After a brief stint in healthcare, her creative side prevailed. The Indiana native moved to New York where her love for fashion and all things beautiful earned her a spot on the world famous Apollo stage as an Apollo model. To make ends meet, she took a job at a beauty supply store on Harlem's bustling 125th Street.

The access to all things beauty and hair gave Gray the initiative to become a self taught extension specialist. Customers loved her looks and often requested her to replicate her hairstyle on them. Her close attention to customer's needs and knowledge of product lines made her stand out and soon she was tapped for her talents to assist one of New York's top Hair Stylists. He was so impressed with Gray after a few projects assisting, that he pulled her aside to suggest she go get her cosmetologist license, and she did just that.
